FROM : [REDACTED]

SUBJECT: Weekly Report: 21 Feb. - 28 Feb. 52

1. We are at the present time giving priority emphasis to the preparation of individual PT reports. These reports contain not only test scores but also information on such matters as leadership, language proficiency, work habits and interests, and temperament and personality. We have also scored the Work Conditions Survey for the following three overseas positions: Reports Officer, Paramilitary Officer, and Intelligence Officer. We plan to readminister the Work Conditions Survey at the end of the course to measure the extent to which their work attitudes and interests have changed as a result of instruction.

2. [REDACTED] of OSI requested assistance in determining to what extent psychologists in other agencies, particularly in the Dept. of National Defense, were carrying out studies on interview and interrogation techniques. This information is important to OSI so that OSI research studies can take advantage of the findings in preparation for their own investigations along these lines. I told [REDACTED] 25X1A9a that I would be glad to help with the study (it might require anywhere from 8 to 16 hours) if he would clear it with you or with Col. Baird. - has been cleared with me. Fle

3. At the suggestion and with the cooperation of [REDACTED] 25X1A9a of Personnel, a conference was held with [REDACTED] of OGD 25X1A9a interpretations of OTR evaluation reports. She stated that they have been finding our evaluation reports, particularly those from UTG/A, of great value. These reports are first read by Mr. James Andrews, the Assistant Director, and then he passes them on to Division and Branch Chiefs. In one instance, the evaluation report called the shot to a T. In another instance, the evaluation report supports their own present observations and has helped them to begin replanning the person's work assignments.

4. Three OCS candidates and four PT applicants have been tested during the past week. The OCS candidates were given "counseling" interviews in connection with their programs.
